Rachel Levine Wins Anthropology TA Award

Congratulations to Rachel Levine for recently being awarded the 2014 Anthropology TA Award! As the recipient of this year's award, Rachel will receive $200 and have her picture hung in the Administrative Offices at 19 Russell St. next to last year's winner, Lauren Norman.

New Laboratory Technician at UTM

After a long process, due to the truly amazing pool of applicants, Trevor Orchard will be joining UTM Anthropology as the new laboratory technician as of April 1. This position includes dedicated support to the curation, use and development of the extensive UTM faunal collection. Deborah Berg will be officially retiring as of March 31.

Trevor is a dedicated zooarchaeologist, so we can still count on strange smells permeating Davis Building on occasion. He comes from a biology and anthropology background in BC, capped by a doctorate here at U of T with Gary Coupland on archaeological faunal resource use in the Northwest Coast, focusing especially on marine ecosystems. Since then, he has held post-docs and taught a range of archaeology and environment/biology courses at several universities in the area, including a successful three years at McMaster where he updated their faunal collection to aid in teaching. Please do take the opportunity to welcome Trevor (trevor.orchard@utoronto.ca) and tell Debbie how much she will be missed (deborah.berg@utoronto.ca).

PhD Candidate Mike Callaghan Co-Authors Chapter in The Handbook of Global Health Policy

Wiley Press has just published The Handbook of Global Health Policy, in which PhD Candidate Mike Callaghan co-authors the final chapter on Globalization and Global Health. Studying Medical Anthropology, Mike is supervised by Profs. Richard Lee and Dan Sellen.

Avini Book and Film Collection

The Avini book and film collection is now available for interested on research regarding the Iran-Iraq war (1980-88). You can find all related information by clicking here. This is a fully academic and university-based research collection which includes 1,000 books and 100 films (both documentary and fiction) on different topics and angles vis-à-vis the Iran-Iraq war (1980-1988). This collection is based in the main library of the University of St Andrews and is open to all academia for their research projects. All the material comes from the official and generous donations of different governmental and semi-governmental research centers and institutions within Iran. All books and most of the documentary films are in the Persian language; however, most of the fictions films are in Persian with English and French subtitles. The aim of the creation of this collection is to create a fully academic bridge between researchers working in this field within and outside Iran.

37th Watts Lecture Presents Dr. Jane Goodall at UTSC on March 27th

UTSC is pleased to announce the 37th Watts Lecture presenting Dr. Jane Goodall. Dr. Goodall is internationally applauded for her scientific studies of chimpanzees and her passionate defense of their natural habitats. She is a primatologist, conservationist, UN Messenger of Peace and founder of the Jane Goodall Institute.

In addressing the UTSC community Dr. Goodall will bring the audience into the world of the Gombe chimpanzees by sharing her early observations and experiences as well as the latest news and stories from the field. She will also share information about the work of the Jane Goodall Institute, a global leader in the effort to protect chimpanzees and their habitats. Awards

U of T 2014 Arbor Awards

The 2014 Arbor Award nomination process is now open! The Arbor Awards were created by U of T in 1989 to recognize volunteers for outstanding personal service to the University. Since then, the University has annually acknowledged the alumni and friends whose loyalty, dedication and generosity has added substantially to the quality of the University of Toronto experience for students, faculty, staff and alumni.

Nominations must be received no later than Thursday, May 1, 2014. The Award Ceremony will take place on September 10th at the President's Residence. Full details on the Arbor Awards can be found online at: <http://alumni.utoronto.ca/about/awards/arbor-awards/>

Calls for Papers

New Website & CFP: Sacred Sites and Contested Regions

This new website is the result of a research project concerning a plethora of issues, ideas and phenomena regarding sanctity and religiosity in contemporary societies. We are checking the possibility to put together articles for a Special Issue on the themes of re-centering borderlands, especially from an angle of 'religion' and affects. In that matter we would like to explore the relations between borders and religion. We wish to put in conversation the studies at the US/Mexico and the Israeli/ Palestine borderlands, in order to call to re-think the analysis of borderland approaches. This could be through a focus on political theologies (and sovereignty) and political ontology, affects and materiality, politics of place and the changing nature of religion and everyday life in places effected by borders and fences.

Particularly, we are looking for scholars that are working on these issues from the Palestinian perspectives and surely following the construction of the Separation Wall.

looking forward to hear from you

Call for Manuscripts, New Book Series on Gender & Islam, Gerlach Press

The new book series Gender & Islam offers an interdisciplinary forum for original and innovative research on gender and sexuality in both past and present Muslim societies, reaching across language and regional boundaries. Our aim is to give visibility and systematic consideration to a wide range of thematically and theoretically linked yet still not firmly structured academic interests in subjects that go beyond the already well-established field of women and gender studies inside area studies. Spaces and Places – Geopolitics in an Era of Globalization, International Studies Association Meeting, March 28-29, 2014, Toronto

The International Network of Scholar Activists invites you to an informational Session at the International Studies Association's Annual Convention

Friday, March 28, 12:30 to 1:30 pm

Saturday, March 29, 12:30-1:30 pm

Simcoe Room at the Sheraton Centre Hotel, Toronto

We are living at a critical moment in history when small actions can play a huge role in moving the human community towards emancipation and away from destructive competition and environmental degradation. The contributions of scholars and teachers is vital to global efforts for social change, yet it presents particular challenges and opportunities for engagement in movement building and resisting neoliberalism in our daily work experiences. Join for our informational session and learn how INoSA supports scholar-activism and vital global movement building processes. In particular, we'll provide an update on organizing for the 3rd US Social Forum in 2015, which will be polycentric--in Philadelphia, Jackson Mississippi, and 2 sites in the western U.S. For more information about INoSA see <http://inosamayfirst.org/>

Capitalism in the Classroom: Neoliberalism, Education and Progressive Alternatives, April 4, 2014, Ryerson University

Organized by Alternate Routes: A Journal of Critical Social Research

(www.alternateroutes.ca); Editors: Carlo

Fanelli and Bryan Evans, Ryerson University

As the austerity agenda intensifies, Capitalism in the Classroom will explore how education is being restructured in light of market pressures to commodify and marketize learning and teaching from pre-school to post-secondary education and beyond. Questions to be explored include: How have state policies increased pressures to corporatize and privatize public education? How have children and youth programs been affected? How has the quality of work and labour been impacted? How have intersecting axes of oppression related to class, race, ethnicity, gender and so forth been reinforced or contested in the classroom? In what ways have student curriculums and teachers' academic freedoms been affected? Have educators and employees challenged such pressures? What role have trade union and community activists played in challenging the prerogatives of capitalism in the classroom? Are there progressive educational alternatives to neoliberalism?

Additional topics will discuss: ongoing theoretical debates; community outreach and education campaigns; cross-sectoral and international comparisons; new pedagogical methods and policy proposals for schooling and education; corporate influences on campus and in the classroom; new technologies and online-learning; publishing and dissemination of research; new public management and academic/non-academic labour; and social justice activism. 2014 Marie Jahoda Summer School, “Public Spaces and Inequalities in Transition - Rethinking the Urban Fabric” July 5-9, 2014, Vienna

The Department of Sociology and the Department of Social and Cultural Anthropology at the University of Vienna are organising the 2014 Marie Jahoda Summer School on the issue “Public Spaces and Inequalities in Transition – Rethinking the Urban Fabric”. The Summer School will take place from July 5 to 9 in Vienna. Applicants are asked to submit their CV (max. 2 pages) and a description of their PhD project (max. 2 pages) to mariejahoda.summerschool@univie.ac.at

The application deadline is March 31, 2014. Evaluation will be based on the congruity of applications with the topics of the Summer School. Applicants will be notified of acceptance by April 7, 2014. Participants will submit their papers of presentation (15 pages + references) no later than June 10, 2014.

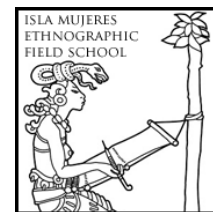

Please find details on the leaflet and on our website: <http://www.soz.univie.ac.at/marie-jahoda-summer-school-2014/>

We are looking forward to applications from PhD students and also invite you to the public keynote speech.

Isla Muejeres Ethnographic Field School, Mexico

We are offering two 6 week Advanced Methods sessions and two 3 week Practicum Sessions for students to choose from. The Practicum sessions also offer a medical anthropology focus for those students interested (one focus will be on teen pregnancy and HIV prevention, the other will be on health, nutrition and diabetes). Our 6 week advanced methods students are also encouraged to participate in these two medical anthropology practicums.

The deadline for applications for the first session (mid-May through July) is April 15th. The deadline for the second session (July through mid-August) is May 15th.

Ethnographic Field School is a great resource for any student of Anthropology, from beginner students to those more advanced in their studies. Many disciplines study issues of Culture and the Environment, political economy, or other cultural studies programs, like Latin American studies, not just Anthropologists -- and anthropology is not the only discipline that utilizes Ethnographic Field Research techniques.

We encourage Undergraduate and Graduate students from the fields of Anthropology, Sociology, Biology, Environmental Sciences, Marine Biology, Forestry, fine art, music (we actually highlight local island artists on our facebook page) and other fields who are interested in learning Ethnographic Field Research Methods and techniques to attend the Isla Mujeres Ethnographic Field School. You can learn about our program on our site www.AnthroFieldSchool.com and on our Facebook page: <https://www.facebook.com/Islamujeresethnographicfieldschool>

GALWAY ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELD SCHOOL

Galway Arcaheological Field School

The Galway Archaeological Field School has been established to provide students with hands-on experience of the archaeology and architecture of medieval Ireland. We specialise in this field and seek to immerse our students in the wealth of medieval castles, churches and monasteries which lie scattered across the Irish landscape. We will offer three courses in 2014 and transferable Academic Credit is available to all students. We aim to provide high quality tuition to all our students and this will be achieved through small class sizes, professional tuition and close on-site supervision. We are primarily an educational institution and so we design our courses and select our survey and excavation sites with one important thing in mind - the provision of first-class training opportunities for our students. Come and excavate a medieval castle in Ireland this summer! Further information at <http://www.galwayarchaeologicalfieldschool.com/>
