Iulia Bădescu Co-Authors Article in American Journal of Primatology

Congratulations to PhD student Iulia Bădescu for being the lead author on a paper published by the American Journal of Primatology. Titled "Female parity, maternal kinship, infant age and sex influence natal attraction and infant handling in a wild colobine (Colobus vellerosus)", the article details research conducted at the Boabeng-Fiema Monkey Sanctuary in Ghana. The article can be read online at <http://onlinelibrary.wiley.com/doi/10.1002/ajp.22353/pdf>

Ethnography Lab – A U of T Anthropology Initiative

The Ethnography Lab recently launched, a new initiative serving as a meeting place for ethnographers working within and beyond the University who wish to reflect upon, develop, and refine their craft. Promoting ethnographic research methods and practice, the Ethnography Lab is arranged in interest groups and explores the craft and impact of ethnography in the contemporary world. The Lab will offer a regular speaker series, act as a resource centre to the university community, and as a link to the outside world via consulting, community activism, and so on. It also has a strong focus on teaching the practical aspects of ethnographic fieldwork at the undergraduate level. Check out the Ethnography Lab's website at <http://ethnographylab.ca/>

Journal of Urban Life Release

The Journal of Urban Life (JUL) is pleased to announce the release of its second edition, "Failures," which can be read at <http://www.jul-magazine.com/index.php/en/>. This peer-reviewed journal is an international collaboration between European and Canadian anthropology graduate students whose aim is to publish innovative ethnographies of contemporary city life through print as well as other artistic approaches. The current issue focuses on the concept of failure, and hones in on the productive and destructive aspects of urban crises. Anthropology PhD students Jess Davidson, Emilie Nicholas and Lukas Ley edited articles for the current issue, which also contains an article by PhD candidate Omri Grinberg.

Please R.S.V.P. acceptances by January 8, 2015 to deanna.pong@utoronto.ca

The Canadian Institutes of Health Research (CIHR) will be hosting a Town Hall at the University of Toronto to update and engage the University research community on its new Open Suite of Programs and Peer Review Process. CIHR began designing a new Open Suite of Programs and peer review system as part of the commitments made in CIHR's second strategic plan, Health Research Roadmap: Creating innovative research for better health and healthcare. Phase I of the Reforms began this past year with CIHR's Foundation Scheme 1st Live Pilot - Stage 1 which is now moving to Stage 2 of its application process. The Town Hall will be an opportunity for CIHR to provide an update on the reforms process, answer questions, and take feedback from the University community.

Awards & Funding Opportunities

U of T Arts & Science Outstanding Teaching Award Nominations

Eligibility : Candidates must hold a continuing appointment at one of the following ranks in the Faculty of Arts and Science (St. George Campus): Associate Professor/Full Professor/Senior Lecturer.

Nomination Procedures : Candidates may be nominated by students (as individuals, or as groups such as classes or course unions), by staff, and by faculty members.

There is no standard nominating form. For each nomination, nominators should write a letter addressing the above criteria. A nomination package is expected to include course evaluation summary sheets for the past 3 years of teaching, student comments/support, and any other supporting materials relevant to the letter of nomination. If the nominators do not have access to course evaluation summary sheets, the Dean's Office will acquire them from the relevant academic unit(s).

Nominations from faculty members other than a Chair or Director should include a letter of support from the relevant Chair or Director. Students with questions about the nomination process may wish to consult either the Arts and Science Students' Union (Sidney Smith Hall, Room I068; 416-978-4903) or the appropriate Chair or Director. Academic units will be asked by the Dean's Office to supply follow-up information, such as the nominees' CVs, (and course evaluation summary sheets if not included in the original package).

Nominations must reach the Dean's Office, Sidney Smith Hall, Room 2005, by Friday, 23 January, 2015. Further info available at <http://www.artsci.utoronto.ca/faculty-staff/awards/outstanding-teaching-awards>. If you have further questions, please call the Dean's Office at 416-978-5412.

Workshops

Using Mindfulness to Slow Down Cognitive decline and Brain Aging: An Evidence Based Approach, December 10, 2014, U of T

Session 1: 1:00pm - 4:00pm

Session 2: 6:00pm - 9:00pm

263 McCaul St., 4th Floor Classroom

Registration is limited to 25 participants per session. Light refreshments will be served. Please register at www.nicenet.ca

Mindfulness is an evidence-based approach that is used widely to promote an overall sense of well-being (from anxiety, low mood and life stressors). The scientific literature suggests that mindfulness can slow down the aging process, including cognitive decline. This workshop is particularly useful for students, clinicians, older adults, caregivers and those who would like to learn more about mindfulness, memory and brain health. By participating in this interactive workshop, participants will have a greater understanding of mindfulness and develop strategies to improve concentration, focus, memory and how to improve and preserve brain health.

Objectives of the workshop:

1. To increase understanding of mindfulness practices,
2. To have greater knowledge of the benefits of mindfulness meditation, and
3. To explore strategies to improve memory and brain health and to incorporate mindfulness as part of your practice.

ITS Seminar for Advanced Undergraduate, MA, and First-Year PhD Students, United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, July 27-31, 2015, Washington, DC.

Introduction to Holocaust Studies through the Records of the International Tracing Service Digital Collection

Application deadline: January 15, 2015

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum's Jack, Joseph and Morton Mandel Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies is pleased to invite nominations for this seminar, designed for advanced undergraduate, MA, and first-year PhD students. The seminar will take place July 27-31, 2015 at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, DC. This seminar is the ninth in a series of academic programs designed to encourage the scholarly use of the International Tracing Service (ITS) Digital Archive. The objective of this seminar is to acquaint promising advanced undergraduate, MA, and first-year PhD students with Holocaust Studies through the records of this rich and diverse collection. Nominations are welcome for students in all relevant academic disciplines, including history, political science, literature, Jewish studies, psychology, sociology, geography, and others.

Adult and Juvenile Osteology and Bioarchaeology Research Workshop Opportunities in Transylvania, Romania

Our osteology and bioarchaeology programs are designed to offer intensive, practical, hands on experience with human osteological remains, focusing primarily on research skill acquisition. They provide a very effective transition between the controlled teaching environment of an osteology academic lab and real "life" burial assemblages. As such, our programs offer an essential and necessary skill set to anyone pursuing a career in physical anthropology, bioarchaeology, forensics or medicine. To further expand their horizons in field mortuary archaeology, our participants can apply as well to our Medieval Funerary Excavation - Lost Churches Project.

PROJECTS:

Adult Osteology Research Workshop: Late Medieval Crisis Populations - The Remaking of the European Frontier

Dates: June 7 - July 4, 2015

Bioarchaeology of Children: Victims of Change – Juvenile Osteology Research Workshop

Dates: July 5 - August 1, 2015

Commingle Remains Osteology Research Workshop - Bioarchaeology and Zooarchaeology Approaches to Collective Burial Analysis

Dates: July - August 1, 2015

Our projects are designed as intensive hands-on field experience programs and, as such, are open to both credit student and non-credit participants. For more information on this program, see attached brochures or visit www.archaeotek-archaeology.org

Teaching Connected Histories of the Mediterranean, NEH Summer Institute for Teachers, July 6-24, 2015, University of Denver

Sponsored by the National Endowment for the Humanities, this summer institute is a partnership between George Mason University and the University of Denver, offering secondary school teachers of courses such as world history, world geography, world religions, and global studies the opportunity to focus on the Mediterranean region from a world historical perspective. Under the guidance of leading scholars currently active in this field, participants will explore ways to incorporate this dynamic region into their existing courses. Building on the strengths of two leading universities in Middle East and Islamic Studies, this three-week summer program connects teachers with the recent scholarship on this region and allows them to access new curriculum materials developed under the direction of several prominent scholars, including some of the institute's faculty, for the K-12 classroom. Successful applicants receive a $2,700 stipend to cover travel, room, and board.

Applications due: March 2, 2015

Applicants notified: March 30, 2015
