Upcoming Workshops

Indigenous Knowledge: Responses to the Truth and Reconciliation Commission, Four Direction's Aboriginal Student Centre's 18th Annual Symposium, November 11-12, 2016, Queen's University

This symposium invites students, scholars, community members, knowledge keepers, and Elders to open a dialogue on the Truth and Reconciliation Commission's Final Report and to think through how new visions of reconciliation can manifest in action.

What does a "new vision" of reconciliation look like? What are the tangible ways in which we can work towards this new vision? What pathways are being forged on the road to reconciliation and who is taking up this labour?

The symposium is particularly invested in fostering discussions on what is being done on the ground—in communities, universities, families and between individuals and collectives—that enact the TRC's Calls to Action and embody the spirit of reconciliation. Please submit proposals for papers, presentations, and/or panels to fdevent@queensu.ca no later than October 7, 2016. Further info at <http://www.queensu.ca/fdasc/programs-and-services/symposia>

Co-constructing knowledge and ethnographic research Productive Encounters Workshop, October 28-October 29, University of Jyväskylä

JYU Discourse Hub & Cold Rush project presents this hands-on workshop in co-designing knowledge. It is an opportunity for ethnographers to consider how to build interdisciplinary research projects that can engage a wider range of publics, specifically non-academic audiences. The aim is to have qualitative researchers learn techniques from design that sharpen their analytical thinking and create opportunities for novel forms of research dissemination and enhance the social impact of their research. The workshop also provides an opportunity to discuss and discover what "deep science" such as ethnography and discourse studies can provide to public debates on social issues. The workshop responds to growing demands for public knowledge exchange, specifically how we attend to language for a changing society. Further details here.

To apply please send a 50-100 word statement of interest that describes your current research and how it may benefit from the workshop platform. Statements can be sent to Lindsay Bell Lindsay.Bell@oswego.edu before October 10th. Priority will be given to those who can attend full workshop.

Wilson Centre Atelier: Qualitative Research Refined, October 24-27, 2016

Nominations for the 2017 Gordon Cressy Student Leadership Awards are now being accepted. Nomination deadline is November 4, 2016.

The Gordon Cressy Student Leadership Awards recognize students that are currently in their final year of study (or completed their studies after June 2016 and are convocating in November 2016) who have made outstanding extra-curricular contributions to their college, faculty or school, or to the University as a whole. Their contributions help to improve the world around them and inspire others to do the same. Award Recipients will be recognized and celebrated at a ceremony in Spring 2017. Please visit alumni.utoronto.ca/cressyawards for further information and nomination instructions

Gates Cambridge Scholarship in Medicine and Life Sciences on Trialect

We have postings on Trialect soliciting applications for The Gates Cambridge Scholarship in Medicine and Life Sciences. There are at least 90 scholarship positions available this year. The Gates Cambridge Scholarship programme was established by a donation from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation to the University of Cambridge; this is the largest ever single donation to a UK university. Gates Cambridge considers applications from citizens from outside the United Kingdom. Further details can be perused at: <https://app.trialect.com/4752/display>

Mitacs Funding for Collaborative International Research

Mitacs is now accepting applications for competitive international research opportunities, including student travel to and from Canada. The deadline to apply is November 9, 2016, at 5 p.m. PST. Projects last 12–24 weeks and are open to graduate students in all disciplines. Select destinations are also open to senior undergraduates. Funding varies by destination.

Students in Canada can do research in: Brazil, Mainland China, at French universities or Inria Research Centres in India, Mexico, Tunisia. Further details at

<https://www.mitacs.ca/en/programs/globalink/globalink-research-award>

Graduate students can also apply to the Mitacs-JSPS Internship, which supports travel to Japan for a 10-week research project in Summer 2017. To learn more, visit the Globalink web page or contact Mitacs International at international@mitacs.ca.

Call for Applications: 2017 Young Scholars Symposium, Institute for Latino Studies (ILS) at the University of Notre Dame

The Institute for Latino Studies (ILS) at the University of Notre Dame is pleased to announce our annual Young Scholars Symposium. Our visiting professor for this year is Michelle Gonzalez Maldonado, Professor of Religious Studies and Assistant Provost for Undergraduate Education, University of Miami.

Professor Gonzalez Maldonado's activities on the Notre Dame campus will include a symposium for advanced doctoral students and pre-tenured professors. We seek applications from young scholars who are working on a dissertation, a book, or another research project related to the study of U.S. Latina and Latino populations. Successful nominees will attend Professor Gonzalez Maldonado's public lecture and participate in a symposium at which they will present a dissertation chapter or essay draft for discussion with Professor Gonzalez Maldonado and ILS faculty fellows. ILS will cover all expenses and offer an honorarium of $500 to each young scholar selected to participate in these events, which will take place April 6-7, 2017. Further details re: application instructions here. Please submit your application materials no later than January 15, 2017 to latino@nd.edu.

2017 Whiteford Graduate Student Award in Applied and Public Anthropology

The Society for Latin American and Caribbean Anthropology (SLACA) announces its Whiteford Award in in honor of Michael B. Whiteford and Scott Whiteford. The award is intended to help a graduate student attend the SLACA Spring bi-annual meeting. The 2017 meeting will be held in Antigua Guatemala, April 6-8. The prize consists of US $1000 to support a student registered in a graduate program in Latin America, the Caribbean or the United States. The prize winner and honorable mention will receive a year membership to SLACA. We encourage anthropology departments to support students entering the competition by providing additional conference travel funds.

Papers submitted to the award's committee are limited to a maximum length of six thousand words, including bibliography. Papers can be from any subfield of anthropology, but they must have an applied component and be based on field research carried out in Latin America, the Caribbean, or among first-generation migrants from these areas. The papers can be written in English, Spanish, French or Portuguese. The student must hold a current membership in SLACA. Awards will be announced at the 2017 SLACA meeting in Antigua, Guatemala (April 6-8). The paper may be submitted as early as Dec. 1, 2016 with a final deadline of February 1, 2017. Direct questions about the prize and review process to either Walter Little (wlittle@albany.edu) or Cristina Alcalde (cristina.alcalde@uky.edu). Please submit papers electronically (as MS Word Files or MS Word-compatible doc files) to Cristina Alcalde, Chair.

Field Schools

Maderas Rainforest Conservancy Field Schools

Are you looking for a primate field school? Maderas Rainforest Conservancy offers winter 2016 and summer 2017 sessions in La Suerte, Costa Rica:

Winter: December 27, 2016 (fly in) to January 8, 2017 (fly out)
 Summer 2017 session A: June 21 (fly in) to July 17 (fly out)
 Summer 2017 session B: July 19 (fly in) to August 14 (fly out)

Apply now for Maderas Rainforest Conservancy's Primate Behavior and Ecology course, taught by University of Toronto graduate Dr. Laura Bolt. La Suerte is home to mantled howler monkeys, white-faced capuchin monkeys, and spider monkeys. Students will spend mornings observing and collecting data on monkeys, and afternoons attending daily lectures, participating in group discussions, and working on assignments. The course will culminate with independent projects on primate behaviour. This field school is excellent preparation for graduate work in primatology.

Course cost is $2095 USD, and an annual scholarship is available through the American Society of Primatologists (visit <https://www.asp.org/grants/scholarship/index.cfm>) for more information and to apply, visit www.maderasrfc.org or contact Dr. Bolt at laura.bolt@mail.utoronto.ca

Andean Action Research: Internship Opportunity/Field Training, December 28th 2016 – January 12th 2017

The Center for Social Well Being celebrates 16 years offering our training program in interdisciplinary qualitative field methods, as well as Spanish and Quechua language learning, in the Peruvian Andes. The combined undergraduate and graduate level course is held at the center's rural base, an adobe lodge on an ecological ranch in the Cordillera Blanca mountain range of the Callejón de Huaylas, 7 hours northeast of Lima. Coursework provides in-depth orientation to theory and practice in field investigation that emphasizes Participatory Action Research methodology and Andean Ethnography centered on themes of SocioEnvironmental Sustainability and integrated Well Being – public, environmental, maternal, family and community, in addition to civic and policy issues of Health, Education, Social Justice, Agrobiodiversity, Community Organization and related topics. Students have the opportunity to actively engage in ongoing projects in local agricultural communities to develop effective interactive field abilities and required language skills to carry out their own research and for placement with appropriate community programs, if desired. Also included are excursions to museums, archaeological sites, glacial lakes and hot springs; optional recreational activities include hiking, mountain biking, rafting, kayaking, rock climbing and trekking. The training program tuition is $3200 US dollars which includes all in-country travel, food and accommodations at the rural center, and course materials.

The program is under the direction of Field Coordinator, Flor de María Barreto Tosi, Ecologist and Organic Farmer, as well as Applied Medical Anthropologist, Patricia J. Hammer, Ph.D. and Program Assistant Isabella Li Chan, doctoral candidate in Global Health, University of South Florida.
