News & Announcements

Heather Miller Appointed Vice-Dean, Teaching & Learning at UTM
Congratulations to Prof. Heather Miller! Effective January 1, 2017, she will be taking on a new role at UTM as the Vice-Dean of Teaching and Learning. She will serve in that position until June 30, 2018. Prof. Miller is currently the Chair of Anthropology at UTM and we wish her great success in her new administrative appointment! Read what the UTM Vice-Principal Academic and Dean had to say about Prof. Miller in their formal announcement here.

Jess Cook Awarded the Janka Seydegart Scholarship in Feminist Studies
PhD student Jessica Cook has been awarded the Janka Seydegart Scholarship in Feminist Studies, given in alternate years to a graduate student enrolled in the collaborative program in Women’s Studies.

Bonnie McElhinny Wins Larkin Award
Congratulations to Prof. Bonnie McElhinny! She has been selected for the June Larkin Award for Pedagogical Development for 2017-18 for her project “Something in the Water: Watershed Pedagogies and Teachings about Water in Toronto”. This award recognizes past achievements, and provides for course release to be dedicated to the development of innovative pedagogy or educational technologies in classroom, community and field settings. This project will include a series of workshops to facilitate exchanges about the strategies various educators are using to decolonize their teachings about water; a working paper that surveys watershed pedagogies (innovative approaches to experiential education) in the Great Lakes watershed and beyond; developing a grant proposal to record these initiatives in a publication, and to re-design existing courses and design a few new ones to develop a distinct cluster of courses at U of T linked to water. The Late Geoffrey Gaherty (PhD, 1970) Donates Books to Anthropology Library
Dr. Geoffrey Gaherty, who obtained his PhD from our department in 1970 under the supervision of Prof. David Hughes, died on July 7, 2016 from complications following a kidney transplant. In his will, he left his collection of anthropology books to the Anthropology Library located in AP 74 at 19 Russell St. 15 boxes of books were delivered to the department on November 21. Undergraduate student Rachelle Hatswell has kindly agreed to volunteer her time to help catalogue the material for our collection. Click here to learn how you can access the library or sign out materials. After completing his thesis on the topic of skeleton variation in seven African populations, Dr. Gaherty became an avid amateur astronomer, becoming a longtime columnist with Night Sky. Protein sequences bound to mineral surfaces persist into deep time by Demarchi et al.

Postdoctoral Fellow Michaela Ecker and Prof. Michael Chazan collaborated on a multi-author article published in eLife 2016;5;10.7554/eLife.17092. In it, they demonstrate the role of mineral binding in preserving the protein sequence in ostrich eggshell, including from the palaeontological sites of Laetoli and Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania. Thermal age calculations demonstrate that the Laetoli and Olduvai peptides are 50 times older than any previously authenticated sequence. The article can be read on Michaela Ecker’s academia.edu page here.

Upcoming Workshops & Conferences

Callous, Cold and Deliberately Duplicitous’: Racialization, Immigration and the Representation of HIV Criminalization in Canadian Mainstream Newspapers

This report co-authored by UTSC Prof. Laura Bisaillon (Health Studies/ Anthropology) and others is the first empirically rigorous study of how Canadian newspapers tell stories about HIV non-disclosure criminal cases. The analysis is based on 1680 news articles published between 1989 and 2015. In the report, the researchers emphasize how Canadian newspapers unjustifiably and overwhelmingly focus on cases involving Black men living with HIV and the stigmatizing, stereotypical and demonizing coverage that results. The report can be read at https://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=2874409. Also check today’s Toronto Star for a related piece for World AIDS Day on December 1st.

The Bricoleur

Volume I: Call for Submissions

The Bricoleur is a new periodical published by graduate students in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Toronto. We publish innovative work from contributors worldwide in an accessible format, bringing anthropological conversations into the public domain. We welcome diverse, multi-media submissions from all sub-fields of the discipline.

The editorial board is now inviting submissions that speak to our inaugural theme: “emergence”. The following questions may be helpful in guiding your submissions, but please feel free to propose other interpretations of this theme:

- Does your work involve an emerging technology or method?
- Does your research engage with emerging social formations?
- Did you encounter novel challenges during your fieldwork work that encouraged you to take your research in a new or unexpected direction?
- Are unexpected findings emerging from ongoing archaeological excavation?
- What material grounds allow (or prevent) something to emerge?
- What are the ethical or political stakes of working with emergent forces, materials, or methods?
- How can we trace or problematize the etymology of ‘emergence’, or, more simply, what does it mean to ‘emerge’?
- Is your research on the forefront of emerging theoretical trends in anthropology?

We accept text, photographic, video, and audio submissions. Please send us a 250 word abstract or proposal that outlines what your submission intends to discuss or show. The editorial board reviews all submissions and works with authors and content-creators to establish guidelines for submission length and format. Submissions may be tied to existing research or to theoretical and methodological explorations (including future research directions).

We have a full peer-review process in place for scholarly submissions, but we also welcome submissions that provide commentary on emerging public issues, which will be posted to our blog. For more info, visit our website here, where you’ll find detailed submission guidelines as well as example submissions.

Unsure if your work fits within this theme? Wondering if your research can be published on our platform? Please contact us at bricoleur.editors@gmail.com.

2017-18 Call for Applications: Halbert Network Fellowship for Faculty and Halbert Post-Doctoral Fellowship

The Halbert Exchange Program at the Munk School of Global Affairs is currently accepting applications for two programs.

Halbert Network Research Fellowship for Faculty supports the creation and early maintenance of collaborative research networks involving both faculty and their graduate students and requires a three-year commitment, renewable each year. The Fellowship provides a maximum of $45,000, evenly divided over the three years. In the first year, funds are provided to visit the Hebrew University in order to create collaborative relationships with colleagues at the Hebrew University. Together, faculty develop a research program built on shared or complementary interests. In the second year, funds are provided to pursue collaborative research while in the third, funds are to be used for a conference or the equivalent to facilitate public presentation and publication of team results. The deadline to submit Stage I applications is Monday, January 16, 2017. The deadline for Stage II applications is Wednesday, March 1, 2017. Application forms and further info are available at: http://sites.utoronto.ca/halbert/HalbertNetwork.shtml

Halbert Post-Doctoral Fellowship: The Halbert Exchange Program at the Munk School of Global Affairs invites applications for the 2017-18 Post-Doctoral Fellowship to be held at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. Fellowship recipients are expected to live in Jerusalem for the academic year and to participate in the life of the department with which they are affiliated. The value of the fellowship is CAD 35,000. Applications must arrive at the Munk School of Global Affairs no later than Monday, January 16, 2017. The committee will notify applicants of their decision by March. Application instructions and further info can be found at: http://sites.utoronto.ca/halbert/HalbertPostDoc.shtml

If you have any questions, please contact Olga Kesarchuk at halbert.munk@utoronto.ca or 416 946 8938.

Canada-China Scholars’ Exchange Program

U of T Arts & Science Teaching Award Calls for Nomination
We would like to bring to your attention a number of teaching awards that are currently seeking nominations:

- A&S Outstanding Teaching Award
  (Deadlines: Nomination Forms due January 9, 2017; Full Nomination Packages for Short-listed Candidates due February 8, 2017)
- A&S Superior Teaching Award
  (for sessional and graduate course instructors; Deadlines: Nomination Forms due January 9, 2017; Full Nomination Packages for Short-listed Candidates due February 8, 2017)
- Early Career Teaching Award
  (Deadline: January 20, 2017)
- President’s Teaching Award
  (Deadline: March 20, 2017)

As part of an ongoing effort to recognize the teaching contributions of instructors from Arts & Science, we have developed a new process for identifying potential candidates and supporting nominations. As part of her role, Pam Gravestock (Director, Teaching Support & Faculty Development) will serve as the point person for teaching awards. Pam has over a decade of experience working on teaching award files, with a particular focus on institutional and external awards. More specifically, her role involves:

- Soliciting names of potential candidates.
- Maintaining a database of potential candidates and award recipients.
- Advising on candidate suitability for various awards.
- Assisting, when necessary, in securing decanal support for awards.
- Working with the Communications Office in Arts & Science to share information about awards and award recipients.
- Consulting with the Centre for Teaching Support & Innovation (CTSI) and the Provost’s Office regarding institutional and external teaching awards.
- Supporting the nomination process for various awards.

If you are interested in submitting a nomination for an institutional or external award, decanal-level support may be required. In order to secure this support in a timely manner, names of potential candidates should be submitted to Pam Gravestock before you begin compiling a nomination package (see details and timelines here). Some external awards also require Provostial level support which requires advance consultation as well.

Please feel free to contact Pam to discuss potential candidates or to inform us of awards that you or your colleagues have recently received at p.gravestock@utoronto.ca or 416-946-7306.

Field Schools

Archaeological Field Methods in Alaska
The Adelphi University, Department of Anthropology welcomes applications for our 2017 summer field school in Alaska. Review of applications will begin January 10 and continue in the order received until the course is full. Research will focus on the newly discovered Holzman site along Shaw Creek where large mammal bones, stone tools, and a nearly complete mammoth tusk were found during an intensive artifact hunting. Join our research team in the scenic Tanana Valley as we investigate the questions, who were the First Alaskans?

Taught by experienced faculty with student-instructor ratios among the lowest available (3:1), this program emphasizes a range of experiential learning opportunities. Already have a field school experience but looking something more, we are also offering an advanced program for graduate credit (0103-532).

For more information about Archaeological Field Methods in Alaska email Brian Wygal (bwygal@adelphi.edu) or visit us online for application instructions at http://anthropology.adelphi.edu/alaska.

Irish Archaeology Field School Summer & Winter Programs in Trim, Ireland
Our field school in Ireland provides third level training in heritage based studies to a number of university partners (see www.iafs.ie for more detail). The IAFS is currently undertaking archaeological investigations as part of the winning Blackfriary Community Heritage and Archaeology Project (BCHAP) in the town of Trim, Co. Meath, Ireland. The archaeology comprises the buried remains of the C13th AD/CE Black (Dominican) Friary and associated graveyard, and is suitable for students from a wide range of backgrounds including archaeology, history, anthropology, forensics – or just students looking for a unique study abroad experience in general. The program will include students of all ages and nationalities working and living in a community context, so students are actively exposed to a multi-award winning public archaeology project.

Our main field season typically take places from May to August, and includes four week accredited courses (through our partners the Institute for Field Research) as well as shorter unaccredited options (http://iafs.ie/wp-content/uploads/2015/10/IFR-leaflet-2017.pdf). We also host a number of faculty led courses for a range of academic partners and are the industry leader in the delivery of customised heritage themed study abroad options.

Last year a winter/spring program, The Medieval Landscape of the Black Friary, was also established, which may interest students with a more flexible study timetable (such as post-graduates). This program includes a four week accredited course (through our partners the Institute for Field Research) as well as two week unaccredited options (see http://iafs.ie/index.php/course-winter-2017-jan-feb/). View our Spring brochure here.

ArchaeoSpain 2017 Projects
Since 1998 we have been teaching the practice of archaeology by providing our participants with all the basics skills they will need when facing their own excavations. This experience will introduce you to the necessities of working outdoors, while being involved in the daily life of a foreign country with different language, culture and history. Below is a list of our International Archaeology projects for 2017. For further information you can visit: http://www.archaeospain.com/

- Pulpon Roman Fortress in central Spain
- Roman City of Pollentia on the island of Mallorca
- Roman site of Monte Testaccio, in the heart of Rome
- Pintia Iron-Age necropolis in northern Spain
- Byzantine basilica of Son Pereto

Juvenile Osteology Research Laboratory Workshop, July 2-29, 2017, Transylvania, Romania
Our Bioarchaeology of Children - Juvenile Osteology Research Workshop is a very unique program designed to offer intensive, practical, hands on laboratory experience working with remarkably well preserved medieval juvenile osteological remains, ranging from prenatal to sub-adult. Focusing primarily on research skill acquisition, it provides an effective transition between the controlled teaching environment of an osteology academic lab and real “life” burial assemblages. For further info see http://www.archaeotek-archaeology.org/bioarchaeology

Off the Beaten Track Summer School
We are pleased to announce the 12th edition of our Anthropological Summer Field School in Malta, Europe. The project is primarily directed toward ethnography, socio-cultural anthropology, and sociology students at the undergraduate and graduate levels; however, all levels of researchers in many fields have found our program useful over the past eleven years. Updated information regarding the project can be reviewed on our website at www.anthropologyfieldschool.org. Information on our scholarship grants can be found at: http://anthropologyfieldschool.org/info/scholarship/scholarship.html
